“The Hospitality of Businessmen: Shibusawa Eiichi and the Imperial Hotel”

February 14, 2014

The Unknown Story of the Imperial Hotel before Frank Lloyd Wright’s Renovation

From March 15 to May 25, 2014, the Shibusawa Memorial Museum will present an exhibition entitled “The Hospitality of Businessmen: Shibusawa Eiichi and the Imperial Hotel.” The exhibition is part of the Shibusawa Memorial Museum’s ongoing “Tracing the Origins of Companies” exhibition series that explores the various companies with which Shibusawa Eiichi was connected.

This time the exhibition focuses on the Imperial Hotel, Ltd., which was established in 1890 and will be celebrating its 125th anniversary next year, making it one of a few companies established in the Meiji period (1868-1912) to be still in operation today. Eiichi was involved with the Imperial Hotel from its establishment in 1890 until 1909, when he retired from his position as chairman of the board of directors. The exhibition focuses on this period, aiming to give a glimpse of Eiichi’s trials and tribulations in connection with the hotel, the training of personnel, the use of the Imperial Hotel by businessmen and their personal interactions.
